detected. "I usually believe new applications using the Startapp command, but do not use it for this application when you believed it.
After the purification, I would discover that it is not creating migration because the package/migration folder in an application. Was it better if you create the folder if you are not there or do something missing? To create initial migrations for an application, run Makemigrations and specify the name of the application. It will be created the migration folder ./manage.py makemigrations Its application should be included in install apps first (inside settings.py). My problem (and as well Model directory and created the my_model.py Allia file, where I put my model. Django could not find my model, so I wrote that there are no migrations to apply. My solution was: in the My app\models__init__.py add the following line: From My Model Import Mymodel there are multiple possible reasons for Django not to detect what to migrate during the Makemigrations command. Migration folder You need a migration package in your application. Installed Apps needs your application to be specified in install Apps. Dict Verbs Start executing Makemigrations -V 3 for verbosity. This could shed some light on the problem. Complete route at installed apps It is recommended to specify the configuration route of the full modulo application "plaly.apps.mycappconfig". Configuration: You may want to ensure that the correct configuration file is configured: Management.py Makemigrations. The name of the application explainly place the name of the application in management. Goal target checks the correct app label His Core Django Django Django Django Django script. The Makemigrations command is quite simple. Here is how to do it in Pycharm. Change the definition of your script script (Ex: Makemigrations -Traceback MYAPP) Matusitles Databases: DB Router When working with DB DB Router, the Router class (its custom router class) needs to implement the all ALLOW SYNCDB. Makemigrations always create migrations for model changes, but if you allow () return false, I have read many answers to this question often affirming simply executing emigrations in some other way. But for me, the problem was in the subclass of models. I have an application confidant who says a label = APPAPP username (in the Apps.py file, next to models.py, views.py, etc.). If, by chance, its target class does not have the same label as the application label (for example, because it is dividing an application too large into multiple), no changes are detected (and no ostile error message). So in my model class I have now: Modeloclassname class (models.model): Meta class: app_label = 'followed username' field_name = models.floatfield () ... running Django 1.10 here. It is a comment, but it should probably be an answer. Make sure your application name is in the configuration.py install apps otherwise no matter what you do will not direct migrations. Installed apps = ['django.contrib.admin', 'django.contrib.auth', 'django.contrib.contenttypes', 'Django.contrib.sessions', 'Django.contrib.messages', 'Django.contrib.staticfiles', 'Blogpy'] Mymodel class (models.model): name = models.CharField (max_length = 64, null = True) Language_code = models.CharField (max_length = 2, default = 'in') is_dumb = models.BooleanField (default = false), I had a path '/' in a line maybe Curvate. The line with is_dumb does not create a model migration with a €. After eliminating the €, a "" worked as expected. So be careful when you copy There are times when ./manage.py makemigrations isa ./manage.py makemigrations ==syapp Jews because they can handle certain conflicts between applications. These occasions occur in silence and several hours of sworship are needed to understand the real meaning of the feared message without detected changes. Therefore, it is a much better option to use the following command: ./manage.py makemigrations 0myapp1 tax Asyapp2 tax ... 0myappn PHP had copied a table from outside django and the default class goal to @C "gestion = false. #####
